Document 1

The scene is set during a schoolgirl rowing¹ competition on the Yarra River in Australia. The narrator is Leni. She is a member of her school's rowing crew².

Laura gathers us in a grassy spot out of the way of the crowd. She has the results of the race, on times.

'Firstly, I'm thrilled with how you raced today. It was strong, consistent rowing,' she says.

5 'St Ann's beat us,' I prompt, glumly.

'St Ann's won the Schoolgirls Division One in 33.04. You guys were second in 33.24.'

'They were twenty seconds ahead?' says Rachel. She sighs through her nose. 'They always beat us.'

10 'Let's not be too disappointed. Second is a very solid result.'

Solid. Something about the word makes me unhappy. I'm the stroke³ of our crew and when we don't win, I take it personally. I'm desperate to be elected Captain of Boats in a few weeks' time, so every race counts.

15 'This is a pre-season, fun race. So we have a little competition on our hands. Gives us something to train for,' Laura says. 'Get a feed and hit the drinks station. Meet back at the boat to row home in an hour and a half.'

Penny Mission grabs me as I head for the school tent on shaky legs. She's in Year Ten – the year below me – and seems keen to be mates. She's sweet, but I'm so busy training I don't have much time for new friends.

20 'Don't worry about St Ann's, Leni,' she says. 'You rowed really well today. We all did.'

She gives me a hug, which I find awkward and wriggle out of. I don't like touching, especially in public.

25 'We beat thirteen other first crews today,' she reminds me.

'But not the crew that counts,' I add.

Penny droops and looks deflated. I can never see the glass half full. My brother, Cristian, says it's not a good character trait.

'Come on,' I say, forcing a smile. 'Let's eat. I'm so hungry I could eat half a cow.'

Document 2

The narrator remembers his school days at Repton, a Public School¹, in the 1930s.

It was always a surprise to me that I was good at games. It was an even greater surprise that I was exceptionally good at two of them: one called fives, the other, squash-racquets. Fives, which many of you will 5 know nothing about, was taken seriously at Repton.

Fives is possibly the fastest ball-game on earth, far faster than squash, and the little ball ricochets around the court at such a speed that sometimes you can hardly see it. You may find it hard to believe, but I
10 became so good at it that I won both the junior and the senior school fives in the same year when I was fifteen. Soon I bore the splendid title 'Captain of Fives', and I would travel with my team to other schools like Shrewsbury and Uppingham to play matches. I loved it.
15 It was a game without physical contact, and the quickness of the eye and the dancing of the feet were all that mattered.

A boy who is good at games is usually treated with great civility by the masters at an English Public School. In much the same way, the ancient Greeks revered their athletes and made statues of them in marble. Athletes were the demigods, the chosen few. They could perform glamorous feats beyond the reach of ordinary mortals. Even today, fine footballers and baseball players and runners and all other great sportsmen are much admired by the general public and advertisers use them to sell breakfast cereals. This never happened to me, and if you really want to know, I'm awfully glad it didn't.

But because I loved playing games, life for me at Repton was not totally without pleasure. Games-playing at school is always fun if you happen to be good at it, and it is hell if you are not. I was one of the lucky ones, and all those afternoons on the playing-fields and in the fives courts and in the squash courts made the otherwise grey and melancholy days pass a lot more quickly.
